KAYLA

Kayla Fowler, Class of 2017, Biological Sciences major International and Global Studies, and Women's and Gender Studies minors

To be a DOUGLASS WOMAN means...

Having the opportunity to gain experience through summer research opportunities that helped me decide that my heart lies in studying neuroscience and radiology.

Campaign gifts have impact. After being accepted into the School of Environmental and biological sciences and becoming part of Douglass, Kayla says she realized that majoring in Biological Sciences would offer her a broad concentration where she could explore different careers, including her interests in pediatrics, oncology, neurology, neuroscience and radiology. Kayla's summer laboratory research opportunity centered on spinal cord injury where she assessed the histology of glial responses of different probe forms. It provided invaluable experience in a laboratory setting.

Now is the time to invest in Douglass to ensure its vitality for the next generation. Join in supporting the campaign by visiting www.campaignfordouglass.org – and Thank You!
